

ENVoY

(Educational NonVerbal Yardsticks)

Your personal guide to classroom management

Pick up new management skills and refine those you already have.
These techniques work well in full classroom settings.

About the program:

ENVoY is committed to helping teachers learn to manage by influence. This course teaches the skills of influence so that we can get results without resorting to power. The “at-risk” population is not motivated by authority, but by relationships.

Topic of study:

- The difference between verbal and non-verbal management techniques
- Recognizing and responding to various learning styles
- The four phases of the teaching lesson
- Establishing and preserving relationships with “at-risk” students

Benefits:

- Teachers will have less stress and more energy
- Teachers will establish and preserve positive relationships with students, parents and colleagues
- Students will become more productive and spend more time on task
- Students will become self-directed and responsible for their learning

About the instructor:

Rachel Babbs, M.E.D., graduate of Advanced ENVoY and ENVoY trainer, has worked as a teacher trainer and has been a teacher for 12 years. Her passion, enthusiasm, humor and knowledge give you an unforgettable experience with easy to use solutions to behavior problems. Rachel is committed to helping teachers learn to manage by influence. Through lecture, demonstration, and role play (simulation), teachers come away from her courses with powerful non-verbal strategies that will enable them to decrease time spent managing students and let them get back to doing what they love – teaching.
